

ECB expected to leave policy on hold today

Equity markets moved lower on both sides of the Atlantic yesterday, despite some positive company earnings newsflow, dovish Fed rhetoric and better than anticipated US data. The move coincided with increased concerns of an escalation in trade tensions between the US and China. The Euro Stoxx fell by 1.1% while the S&P 500 declined by 1.4%.

Data-wise, US industrial production rose by 0.6% in June, double the 0.3% consensus. Meantime, comments from Fed officials Waller, Williams and Barkin acknowledged the recent improvement in US CPI, and indicated that the central bank is moving closer to cutting rates. However, remarks in an interview from former President Trump had a more significant impact on FX markets. He questioned whether the US would defend Taiwan, and stated that the strong dollar was hurting US competitiveness.

Against this backdrop, the dollar was under some downward pressure yesterday. This saw EUR/USD trade to a high of $1.0948 and GBP/USD to a fresh YTD peak of $1.3044. Elsewhere, the yen rose sharply amid speculation of further intervention by Japanese authorities to support the currency. As trading gets underway this morning, this sees USD/JPY down in the ¥156-157 range. EUR/USD opens above $1.09. GBP/USD is operating just below $1.30. EUR/GBP remains in and around 84p.

Already this morning, UK labour market data have printed in line with the forecast. The unemployment rate stayed at 4.4%, while average earnings growth slowed to +5.7% y/y. Later today, all eyes will be on the ECB monetary policy decision. No changes are expected, meaning the focus will be on any guidance in relation to a rate cut in September.
